The Club will not collect, use, or disclose personal information except for the identified purposes for collection. The Club will only disclose personal information where authorized by PIPA or required by law.

The Club's system administrators have access to the information that you shared with Rowing Canada Aviron (RCA). Individuals who provide personal information to RCA, are implying their consent to the use of that Personal Information for the purposes identified. RCA has an agreement in place that ensures that PIPA obligations are followed.

Individuals may withdraw consent, request access to their personal information held by the Club or lodge a complaint, as is their right, at any time by notifying the Club secretary in writing. If an individual is not satisfied with how the Club has performed its duties under PIPA, contact the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner.

In the event of a suspected privacy breach, the Club will report concerns and seek direction from the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner.
